"PREACHER KISSED HER UNDER WATER," SAYS DIVORCE WITNESS

Rev. Francis Godolphin of Fashionable Oak Park Church Named as Inventor of "Submarine Buss"

—Gossip Caused by Goodspeed Divorce Case—Minister Denies Story.

In Oak Park today the fashionable parishioners of the Grace Episcopal Church stopped, put their heads together, and between giggles discussed the "submarine kiss," of which the Rev. Francis R. Godolphin is said to hold the patent rights.

The Rev. Godolphin's name was dragged into the trial of the John W. Goodspeed divorce case yesterday by Miss Iva Walter, a witness, who said that Mrs. Maud Goodspeed learned to love the Rev. Godolphin madly after he had torpedoed her with a submarine kiss.

The kiss sounds easy, but it is said to be rather difficult and one must attempt it several times before it can be learned without swallowing several times before it can be learned without swallowing several quarts of water. But let Miss Walters tell about it:

"Mrs. Goodspeed told me she and the Rev. Godolphin were in love with each other. She said they used to go swimming together and that they would both dive under water and there kiss."

But, according to Miss Walters,
